140 word bio

As a performing songwriter, Patty Clayton's music consists of original ballads and borrowed songs about today and yesterday in the West. Her inspiration comes not only from being raised in the West, but also from her family, who were Oregon Trail emigrants and pioneers, and prominent ranchers during the late 19th century in the Pacific Northwest.

Since the early 1970's, Patty has been performing for a variety of folk and traditional music events and has been awarded several winning trophies for her vocal and songwriting capabilities.. She has released six notably acclaimed recording projects featuring her own original material.

Patty was awarded the Female Performer of the Year and Western Swing Album of the year for her release entitled Dancin' In Denver from the International Western Music Association in 2004 and 2012 respectively, and the Academy of Western Artists for Western Female Vocalist in 2007.
